Major Activities:

- Conducting classes for students from 100L – 500L on urban planning principles and concepts, skills in analyzing and designing urban space, and theoretical knowledge of world scenarios
- Coordinating and dividing students into various groups for practical classes; assigning case studies within the local neighbourhood; Conducting site analysis of the subject site for planning studio by identifying various existing features natural and made; Identifying existing land uses; and documenting the field observations using field book, video recording, voice recording, photographs and picking of geographical coordinates of important features with the use of Global Positioning System (GPS), where Satellite Imagery is not available, a drone can be flown to capture the aerial view and Imagery of the subject site.

- Provision of Planning Briefs such as the procedure to follow in designing and redesigning where necessary for any proposed urban design, urban planning, master planning, regional planning, comprehensive planning, neighbourhood planning among others; Brainstorm with the students on their current view and ideas about the proposed urban planning or any other studio design ahead of them; recommendation of the case studies as a guide for their proposed design, sketching of ideas by conceptual consideration; while giving them the idea that, the proposed design must consider the integration of pedestrians facilities and traffic signages, efficient transportation flow, adequate provision of green spaces, reasonable allocation of land uses, facilities, basic services among others.
- Since urban planning encourages collective effort and action, students are usually encouraged to work together mostly at the fieldwork stage and present acquired data from the field. Strengths, weaknesses, and feasibility of the studied environment will also be asked. However, at the end of presentations, members from each group are usually questioned on their participation and involvement.
- Guiding students on field trips, more importantly, visits to local environments, tours of city planning, attending professional planning meetings, and mandatory programmes for professionals.
- Teaching students the application of Automated Computer Aided Design (AutoCAD), Geographic Information System (ArcGIS), Surfer for Windows (Golden Surfer), Google Earth, Google Maps, Open Street Map, Eldas Imagine, CivilCAD, and Revit Architecture among others to Urban Planning Design.
- Continuous supervision of students daily activities, participation, involvement and engagements, quality of individual/group work, presentation of updates from time to time, group and individual report reflection papers and quizzes
- Teaching of students some courses as listed below in the field of Urban and Regional Planning, Estate Management, Surveying and Geoinformatics, Land Scape Planning, Urban Design, Environmental Planning and Management and administration of continuous assessments and examinations to students in order to grade their knowledge of the thought courses.
